11.3 for Loops. A for loop repeats a chunk of code many times, once for each element in a set of input.for loops provide a way to tell R, "Do this for every value of that." In R syntax, this looks like: for (value in that) { this }. The that object should be a set of objects (often a vector of numbers or character strings). The for loop will run the code in that appears between the braces ...
